Spring Semester 2006

UNDIVIDED EUROPE
DEMOCRATIZATION AND INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS
AFTER COMMUNISM

This course explores the collapse of communist rule in 1989, and the reaction of international institutions to the challenges of democratization, economic transition, ethnic conflict and European integration in an undivided Europe. As background, we will study the condition of states, nations and ethnic minorities in Eastern Europe before and during the Second World War. We will also study the nature of communist rule in Eastern Europe, of Soviet hegemony in the communist bloc, and of European integration in Western Europe during the Cold War. So prepared, we will explore the tremendous changes that have taken place in Europe since 1989. The post-communist states of Eastern Europe have embarked on sweeping domestic reforms aiming to create liberal democratic states with functioning market economies. The international institutions of Western Europe have struggled to adapt and to respond to the new challenges of an undivided Europe, and to support these reforms. Most dramatically, the European Union now has many new members, candidates and proto-candidates from formerly communist lands. EU enlargement is probably the most successful democracy promotion program ever implemented by an international actor. Most tragically, the building of a peaceful, democratic and prosperous Europe has been severely marred by ethnic cleansing and war in the former Yugoslavia. The two overarching questions at hand are: (1) How can we explain the great variation in the nature of political change in East European states after 1989?; and (2) What role have international institutions and other international actors played in shaping the course of this change? More broadly, what determines the utility of international organizations or other international actors in preventing conflict and promoting democratization and economic revitalization?

Reserve Readings

The other readings for the course will be available through the course website (<http://www.unc.edu/~eedwards>). Short articles (that may not appear on the syllabus) will also be posted on the website or sent via email.

Course Requirements

1. Attendance, homework and participation in class discussions: 20%.
2. Two tests: 20% (10% each).
3. Two short papers: 40% (20% each).
4. Final paper: 20%.

The short papers will be five to six pages each; the long paper will be about 15 pages long. Students will choose one of three questions to answer. There will be a handout on how to write and document the short papers. Most important, papers must include original research; they must be double-spaced and in 12 point font; and they must be turned in no later than in class on the day they are due. Late papers will be marked down one letter grade per day.

Questions

If you have substantive questions about the course, please come see me during my office hours. Please email me at vachudov@email.unc.edu to set up appointments only in the case that you absolutely cannot come to office hours. Also please do come see me if you have any concerns about your performance, or any suggestions for how to improve the course. If you are a student at Charlotte or NCSU and you have questions that are not fully answered in section, please call me at my office at 919-962-0415. Generally I will not be able to answer substantive questions over email.

If you are writing to explain an absence or a late paper, or to re-schedule a missed test, please email the teaching assistant at eedwards@email.unc.edu.

Original Work

It is expected that any written work turned in for this class represents original work not previously or simultaneously handed in for credit in another course, unless this is done with the prior approval of all instructors involved.

Revised Syllabus

A revised version of this syllabus may be posted in the first week of February. At that time, there may be changes to the readings for the rest of the semester.
